EADA Business School consolidates its position among the top business schools

- The business school cluster in Barcelona retains its podium position as one of the best destinations for management training, alongside Paris and London.
- The Financial Times has published its European Business Schools ranking with four Spanish schools in the top 30

Barcelona, 5th December 2022.

EADA Business School has consolidated its privileged position among the top business schools in Europe at number 27, according to the European Business Schools ranking, published today by the prestigious Financial Times.

One of the characteristics of this ranking is that it is based on the average of the rankings carried out during the year of the different programmes offered by business schools (MBA, EMBA, Master in Management, Open Executive Education and Custom Programmes) and is therefore considered to be the most comprehensive. To be included in the ranking, the Financial Times stipulates that all institutions must be EQUIS or AACSB accredited.

According to Jordi Díaz, Dean at EADA Business School, “It is not easy to maintain this level of excellence in such a competitive global context as the current one, but as an institution, our commitment is clear: growth which will continue to create a positive impact through our graduates”.

EADA Business School was founded in 1957 as an ideologically and financially independent institution. As well as appearing in the renowned global rankings of the Financial Times and The Economist, it holds the EQUIS accreditation from the EFMD (European Foundation for Management Development) and the AMBA which recognises the quality of MBA programmes.
